Vildmosevej

Tværs igennem Lille Vildmose er der anlagt et par landeveje, der forbinder de små byer, som ligger i udkanten af mosen. En af disse veje er Vildmosevej. Vildmosevej forbinder Kongerslev i vest med kystvejen langs farvandet Kattegats kyst.

Mange oplever fra deres bil mosen i de minutter, det tager at krydse mosen. Langs vejen er der store flade arealer, hvor bilisterne ofte kan se rovfugle, der søger føde, og store flokke af gæs og andre fugle, der rastløse skifter fourageringsplads ude på det store moseområde.

Førhen kunne bilisterne fra vejen se mosebrugets maskiner og især de små smalsporede baner med tipvogne, der fragtede spagnum og tørv ind til fabrikken i Kongerslev. Fra vejen får man også indtryk af de store kridtgrave, der fortsat er i produktion uden for Kongerslev by.

Mine ture ind i mosen har altid startet med cykelturen eller bilturen på Vildmosevej ud til de mål i mosen, som jeg har udset til dagens naturoplevelser. Men jeg har også haft mange naturoplevelser i de arealer, der støder op til vejen.

Denne serie viser fotos fra Vildmosevejen og fra de arealer, der støder op til vejen.

The road Vildmosevej

A couple of country roads run through Lille Vildmose, connecting the small towns located on the edge of the bog. One of these roads is Vildmosevej. Vildmosevej connects Kongerslev in the west with the coastal road along the shoreline of the Kattegat Sea.

Many people experience the bog from their car during the few minutes it takes to cross it. Along the road are large flat areas, where drivers often can see birds of prey searching for food and large flocks of geese and other birds restlessly moving between feeding grounds out on the vast bog area.

In the past, drivers could see the peat industry's machinery from the road, especially the narrow-gauge tracks with tipper wagons that transported sphagnum and peat to the factory in Kongerslev. From the road, one also gets an impression of the large chalk pits that are still in operation outside the town of Kongerslev.

My trips into the bog have always started with the bike or car ride along Vildmosevej to the destinations in the bog that I had chosen for the day's nature experiences. But I have also had many nature experiences in the areas adjacent to the road.

This series shows photos from Vildmosevej and from the areas bordering the road.
