Hvid jul

I Danmark har begrebet hvid jul stor emotionel betydning. Mange synes ikke, at der er rigtig jul, hvis jorden ikke er dækket med sne.

Ud fra den betragtning skulle man tro, at det normale er, at landskaberne er klædt i hvidt, når familierne samles om juleanden og gaverne. Sådan er det ikke.

Meteorologerne har fastsat, at deres krav til at kalde det en hvid jul er, at halvfems procent af landet om eftermiddagen den 24. december er dækket af mindst ½ centimeter sne.

Denne situation har kun forekommet ni gange de seneste 221 år. Sidste gang, vi oplevede hvid jul var i år 2010.

White Christmas

In Denmark, the concept of white Christmas is of great emotional importance. Many do not feel a real Christmas, if the landscape is not covered with snow.

From this point of view, one would think, that the landscapes almost every year are dressed in white snow, when the families gather around the Christmas cheer and the Christmas presents. It is not like that.

The meteorologists have determined that their requirement for a white Christmas is, that ninety percent of the country on the afternoon of December 24 is covered by at least 1/2 centimetre of snow.

This situation has only occurred nine times in the last 221 years. The last time we experienced white Christmas was in the year 2010.

Merry Christmas!
