En negativ kultur?

At bevare og videreføre skove og træer er ikke kun et miljøspørgsmål. Det er i grund og bund et spørgsmål om den kultur, som vi som mennesker mener at bære.

En kultur, der bringer naturen ud af balance, skaber klimaproblemer og fjerner livsgrundlaget for utallige typer insekter og større dyr er en kultur, der af fremtidens generationer vil blive betegnet som en negativ kultur.

Træerne er en vigtig del af vores omgivelser. Træerne giver landskaber karakter, hvad enten det er det ensomme træ på en mark, træer langs landevejen og træerne i de store skove. Det er ikke kun deres udseende. De er hjemsted for mange dyr. Træerne har deres egne dufte, og min absolutte yndlingsmusik er vindens susen i træernes toppe.

Vores forvaltning af skove og træer vil få stor indflydelse for kommende generationers levevilkår. En generation kan plante træer og skove, men disse smukke vækster vil først være fuldt udviklet flere generationer senere.

Hver uge hører jeg den rædselsfulde lyd: Motorsaven. Dens støj flænses sig dybt ind i mit hjerte. Nu fælder de måske endnu et af byens smukke træer. Næsten alle husstande har i dag en motorsav. Og når man har et sådant redskab, så skal det nødvendigvis bruges. Og det koster mange af landsbyens smukke træer deres liv.

I USA ønsker mange at få stoppet masseskyderi ved at forbyde automatvåben i de private hjem. Måske skulle vi i Danmark forbyde motorsaven i de private hjem?

A negative culture?

Preserving and maintaining forests and trees is not just an environmental issue. It is basically a question of the culture that we as human beings believe to carry.

A culture that knocks nature off balance creates climate problems and removes the living conditions of countless types of insects and larger animals is a culture that by future generations will be described as a negative culture.

The trees are an important part of our surroundings. The trees give character to landscapes, whether it is the lonely tree in a field, the trees along the road, and the trees in large forests. It is not just their appearance. They are habitat to many animals. The trees have their own smells, and my absolute favourite music is the whistling of the wind in the tops of the trees.

Our management of forests and trees will have a major impact on the living conditions of future generations. One generation can plant trees and forests, but until several generations later these beautiful increments will not be fully grown.

Every week I hear the horrific sound: the chainsaw. Its noise tears deep into my heart. Maybe they now cut down another of the beautiful trees in the village. Today, almost every household has a chainsaw. And having such a tool, then it necessarily must be used. And it costs many of the village's beautiful trees their lives.

In the United States, many want to stop mass shootings by banning automatic weapons in private homes. Perhaps we in Denmark should ban chainsaws in private homes?
