Efterårsstemning

Uden for er det efterårsvejr. Stormende kuling med vindstød op til storm, fortæller meteorologen. Et lavtryk har sendt den første efterårsstorm ind over Nordjylland.

Langs vestkysten er der storm. Voldsomme bølger rammer kysten og vandet piskes til skum. Flere steder når bølgerne helt op under høje skrænter. Skånselsløst æder havet sig ind i skrænten. Menneskets bygninger oppe over skrænterne vil om få år styrte i havet.

I min have ånder der mere fred. Højt oppe over skrænten får den tiltagende vind træerne til at give en susende lyd. Efterårsbladene kommer langsomt dalende ned over min have og mit hus. Fuglene er krøbet i skjul i det tætte buskads. Der sidder de og pudser fjer, mens de venter på at vinden igen lægger sig.

Havens insekter og blomster synes at være uberørt. Her nede under skrænterne mærker de ikke meget til vinden, og de synes at trives med efterårsregnen. Edderkoppens spind og blomsternes kronblade er dekoreret af de fineste vanddråber – eller er det tårer, fordi sommeren nu er ovre?

For mig virker efterårsvejr som en dejlig kulisse. Min stue bliver ekstra hyggelig, når regnen slår på ruden. Ilden i brændeovnen giver god varme og ildens skær leger med siderne i den bog, jeg sidder og læser: Brevsamlingen - Karen Blixen i Afrika.

Autumn mood

Outside, it is autumn weather. Fresh gale with gusts up to storm, the meteorologist says. Low pressure has sent the first autumn gale over North Jutland.

Along the west coast, there are gale. Violent waves hit the shore and the water is whipped into foam. In several places, the breakers reach all the way up under the high slopes. Ruthlessly, the sea eats into the slope. In a few years Man's buildings above the slopes will fall into the sea.

In my garden, there is more peace. High above the slope, the trees are whispering in the wind. The autumn leaves slowly descend on my garden and house. The birds are taking cover in the dense bushes. There they sit and preen their feathers while waiting for the wind to moderate again.

The insects and flowers of the garden seem to be untouched. Down here under the slopes, they do not feel much of the wind, and they seem to thrive with the autumn rain. The spider's web and the petals of the flowers are decorated with the finest water droplets – or are they tears because summer is now over?

To me, autumn weather feels like a nice coulisse. My living room gets extra cozy when the rain beats on the window. The fire in the stove provides good warmth and the glow of the fire plays with the pages of the book I am reading: The Collection of Letters - Karen Blixen in Africa.
