Milde & fugtige vinterdage

De sidste dage i januar var den her slags mørke vinterdage, hvor temperaturen ligger lige omkring frysepunktet. Alt virker vådt, og der er intet spor af det klassiske vintervejr med sne og is. Dagene starter og slutter med landskaber indhyllet i tæt tåge.

Alligevel kan ture ud i det østhimmerlandske landskab give mange interessante og specielle oplevelser. Ude i mosen er sangsvanerne samlet i store flokke på markerne. Den lyse musvåge sidder og overvåger engene i en evig jagt på mus og mosegrise. Ude ved havet er der stille. Her kan man opleve en gåtur langs kysten helt for sig selv.

Ikke en vind rører sig, og der er forbavsende stille. Kun lyden af støvlernes møde med den våde, mudrede sti. Dagene er korte og allerede tidligt på eftermiddagen tones landskabet i det typiske rødlige skær.

Ugens foto er fra tilsvarende milde og fugtige vinterdage i december 2011.

Mild & damp winter days

The last days of January were dark winter days, when the temperature hovered just around freezing. Everything felt damp, and there was no sign of the classic winter weather with snow and ice. The days began and ended with landscapes wrapped in dense fog.

Still, outings into the Eastern Himmerland landscape can offer many interesting and special experiences. Out in the bog, whooper swans gather in large flocks on the fields. The pale common buzzard sits watching over the meadows, ever on the hunt for mice and voles. By the sea, everything is quiet. Here, one can take a walk along the coast entirely alone.

Not a breath of wind stirs, and it is astonishingly silent. Only the sound of boots meeting the wet, muddy path. The days are short, and already early in the afternoon, the landscape takes on its characteristic reddish glow.

These photos of the week are from similarly mild and damp winter days in December 2011.
