

The wind as an artist

The wind is an eminent artist. The wind plays with the snow, forming shapes and movements of unique beauty.

The wind is not a nostalgic artist. It does not save its work of art like the human artists. The works of art of the wind are continually changing, and finally the wind whispers its own works of art away.

I am also fascinated by the process. The work of art of the wind is not only the snow drift, but the snow that drifts through the landscape.

We know the snow forms and we see them again and again in the landscape. But anyway, we can only approximately reproduce these forms.

I am trying to cheat the wind with my camera. The photograph can capture some of the beauty of the created works of art in the snow.
