

Closing of the day

When did you last find time to have a closer look at the sunset?

In our busy life we rarely find time to experience the moments when the nature, which we ourselves form a part of, find an expression that brings insight, warmth and joy.

In everyday life, we are working to accomplish the necessary tasks at work and at home. Often we lose in this bustle the perspective with our lives. We are so busy working and learning that we may achieve the opposite?

Perhaps we should be better at finding time for some of today's culminations? For instance the spectacular sunsets over the mountains around the town?

A moment we could call a break from the bustle of the day. It may be a moment where we gain more insight and wisdom than we can find in the brightest scientific report.

That is where we do not consider our present world, but dream about how our world can be.

Nuuk, August 2007