Snehvide fjelde & dybe mørke fjorde

November måned. Landskabet i Sydgrønland er klædt i nysne. Den hvide sne danner kontrast til de dybe, mørke fjorde.

Det bløde lys og den milevide ødemark afbrydes kun få steder af menneskets små fåreholdersteder og af de øde beliggende højspændingsmaster med tunge wirer, der bringer strøm fra et fjernt vandkraftværk til menneskets små bosætninger i det sydligste Grønland.

Dagene er korte, og allerede tidlig eftermiddag når solens stråler kun de højeste bjergtinder. Vinterens lys giver det frosne landskab nyt liv, inden vinternatten for alvor lægger sig over en af de yderste egne for menneskelivet her på kloden.

Snow-white Mountains & Deep, Dark Fjords

The month of November. The landscape in South Greenland is dressed in fresh snow. The white snow contrasts with the deep, dark fjords.

The soft light and the vast wilderness are only interrupted in a few places by small sheep farms and by the lonely high-voltage pylons with their heavy wires, which carry electricity from a distant hydroelectric plant to the small human settlements in the southernmost part of Greenland.

The days are short, and already in the early afternoon the rays of the sun only reach the highest mountain peaks. The winter light gives new life to the frozen landscape before the long winter night truly settles over one of the remotest regions inhabited by humankind on this planet.
